Guide to Names, Cities and Terms

ALPEROWITZ (al-por-uh-vich). The family name of the Alperets and Cohens in Russia as assigned by a tsarist official in the early 19th century. The witz suffix, which means "son of," was transliterated by the immigrants using a Polish spelling.

COHEN. The name adopted by three branches of the Reuben Alperowitz family upon immigration to America. About 2-3 percent of the Jewish population has the name Cohen or some variation of it; some 118,000 Americans use the spelling Cohen, and another 25,000 use Cohn or Kohn.

DOKSCYZE (dock-shets; Doksizy, Rus.). A town in the Vilna gubernia, one hundred miles northeast of Vilna, near Dunilowicze and Dolhinow; forty miles north of Sosenka. Chartered as a township in the Minsk province of Poland in 1609, Dokszyce was annexed by Russia in 1793 and returned to Polish government from 1921-1945. Population 5,400 in 1878. Birthplace of Chivia Alperowitz's husband, Yankev Kappellowitz; and of Hyman Epstein, husband of Sarah Cohen.

DOLHINOW (dahl-hee-nef; Dolginovo, Rus.). A town in the Vilna gubernia, twenty-five miles east-northeast of Vileika; ten miles north of Sosenka. Population 3,551 in 1897, two-thirds of which was Jewish. The birthplace of Simon and Jacob Cohen; possibly the home town of Rosa Kramer Cohen. Merke Alperowitz's eldest son, Max Alpert, and Yankev Alperowitz's youngest son, Robert Cohen, attended a yeshivah in Dolhinow.

DUNILOWICZE (duh-nil-o-vich; Dunilovichi, Rus.). A town in the Vilna gubernia located eighty miles northeast of Vilna and one hundred miles north of Minsk; population in 1931 was 2,250. The birthplace of the children of Yankev and Itka Alperowitz.

GUBERNIA (gu-bear-ny-a). A major administrative division and seat of government in Russia comparable to a province or state. Gubernias were first established in the 18th century under Peter the Great but have been replaced in the Soviet system by the oblast.

ILYA (eel-ya; Ilja, Pol.). A small town in the Vilna gubernia; population 1,429 in 1897. Its location five miles south of Sosenka made it the closest city with a population exceeding 1,000 people. Ilya was the home of one of the most enlightened rabbinical scholars of 19th century Russia, Manasseh ben David. Dora Koppelowitz, wife of Samuel M. Cohen came from Ilya.

KURENETS (core-nits; Kurzeniec, Pol.). A small lumber town in the Vilna gubernia located about five miles north of Vileika, ten miles northwest of Sosenka. Alperowitz was the most common name among its Jewish inhabitants possibly accounting for the assignment of this name to the family. Kurenets was the birthplace of several Alperowitz mates.

SMORGON (smorg-own; Smorgonie, Pol.). City forty-five miles southeast of Vilna, fifteen miles west of Vileika; population 8,872 in 1897, 76 percent of whom were Jews. Annexed by Russia in 1793, reverted to Poland in 1921 and re-annexed by the USSR in 1945. From the 16th century until the second half of the 19th century the town was the private property of the princes of Radziwill. Birthplace of the daughters of Shprintze Alperowitz Maskind. Merke Alperowitz died there circa 1915.

SOSENKA (suss-in-ka; Sosenki, alt. Pol.). A townlet in the Vilna gubernia situated eighty miles east of Vilna and fifty miles north of Minsk, its geographic coordinates being 54° 31'N x 27°14'E. Population 85 in 1865 and 226 in 1890. Located within a region governed by the Poles and then the Russians during the 18th and 19th centuries, but historically and ethnically Lithuanian. Sosenka was the home of the Reuben Alperowitz family.

VILEIKA (vil-lay-ka; Wilejka, Pol.). A lumber trading center ten miles west of Sosenka, established around 1766. Annexed by Russia in 1793, incorporated into the Vilna gubernia in 1842 and made a district seat as a result of the 1863 Polish uprising. Population 1,250 in 1885.

VILNA (Wilno, Pol.; Vilnius, Rus.). Originally the capital of the Grand Duchy of Lithuania; became a Polish city when Lithuania and Poland became one kingdom in 1569 and was absorbed by Russia in 1795. Vilna was considered the main seat of Jewish culture in Europe and was the home of many famous rabbis, scholars, writers and historians. The Bund, the most influential political party of Jewish workers in Russia and Poland, originated in Vilna in 1897.

VILNA GUBERNIA. Established between 1793-1797 as one of three gubernias along with Belorussia and the Ukraine as a result of the Russian annexation of Poland. Originally called the Lithuania Gubernia because it incorporated much of the territory of the original Grand Duchy, the area came to be referred to as the Vilna Gubernia after Tsar Nicholas I prohibited the use of the name Lithuania in the early 19th century. In 1863 a number of regional boundary lines were redrawn and this gubernia was redefined as a more specific administrative district. Most of the Alpert-Cohen ancestors were born in towns located within the Vilna gubernia as it existed before and after the 1863 redivision.

Map of the Lithuanian and Belorussian border region incorporating the southern portion of the old Vilna gubernia. Sosenka, Ilya, Vileika (circled), Dunilowicze, Dolhinow, Smorgon, Kurenets and Dokscyze all appear with variant spellings. In 1916 the tsar established his war headquarters in Baranovici, the southernmost city on the map. It was chosen for its location at the point where the railway line from Moscow to Brest-Litovsk intersected with the north-south line from Vilna to Rovno.

Map of central Maine incorporating Penobscot and adjoining counties. Sangerville, Brownville and Brownville Junction, where Simon, Max and S.H. Cohen established themselves prior to returning to Bangor, were served by the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad - which perhaps explains, in part, their reasons for settling there.
