FROM THE RABBI

Funny thing about us Jews is that we love to compete with each other for bragging rights to who is suffering the most!

From the Talmud: “Rabbi Yochanan said: The task of providing a person’s food is twice as difficult as the suffering endured by a woman in childbirth.” (Pesachim, 118a). So, working for a living—historically, a man’s job—is twice as difficult as childbirth! Lest you think this bit of “mansplaining” is plucked out of thin air, rest assured that Rabbi Yochanan (a man if you hadn’t already figured that out) has a biblical verse to “support” his statement. When Adam and Eve were expelled from Eden, and Eve—and all future women—were eternally cursed with the pain of childbirth, The Torah uses a singular form of the word “pain.” However, when Adam—along with all future men—were cursed with eternally having to suffer to make a living, the word “pain” is in plural form. The minimum plural is two, so, if you think about it, Rabbi Yochanan was actually being generous to women by “limiting” his statement to only twice as difficult!

But it goes on. The Talmud next asserts that eking out a living from the soil is in fact more difficult than “redemption” and equivalent in difficulty to the splitting of the Red Sea! So, if you’re keeping score, the suffering of working men is twice as difficult as childbirth, somewhat more difficult than “redemption” and as difficult as splitting a sea. Rest assured, there are “supporting” biblical verses here as well.

But we’re not done yet. If we’re already talking about things that are very difficult and painful, obviously constipation had to enter into this discussion? The Talmud concludes by asserting that splitting the Red Sea and dealing with the pain of constipation are also equivalently difficult!

Asking what the point of this bizarre Talmudic discussion, is, I think, a fair question. Well, for one, it shows us that you cannot have a truly comprehensive and frank discussion of life’s suffering if you’re squeamish. This is a point that will surely be appreciated by those who attend our Shabbat morning services from the very beginning—when we get to talk about bodily functions--as well as Jewish grandmothers everywhere. Not to mention, that constipation was undoubtedly the closest the Rabbis ever came to experiencing the pain of childbirth!

Seriously though, what do childbirth, working for a living and dealing with constipation have in common? They are all situations where no matter how difficult and painful they get—you just can’t quit. The baby will come out, people need to eat, and that colon has to be cleared. In other words, as desperate as you might be to just throw in the towel and walk away, biological imperative will force you to see all of these through to the end.

Redemption, on the other hand, can seem optional. We all hope to bring the world to a better place, but it is so difficult—and so tempting to simply throw up our hands and give up trying. World peace, gender, class and race, divisive politics, hate, climate, hunger, disease, all seem so beyond our reach. These Talmudic comparisons, as bizarre and flawed as they may be, make the point that we can in fact do things that are immensely difficult—so overwhelmingly difficult and painful that we question our very ability to see them through. But we do. Because we have to.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

The Central Artery tunnel in Boston is three lanes of (usually) fast moving bumper to bumper traffic. When driving through the Central Artery tunnel in Boston, I'm always leaning forward trying to see around the corner, to the light at the end of the tunnel. When I come into the light, I can relax my grip on the steering wheel and know that I am past the difficult part. But, I don't relax until I am out of the tunnel, as the danger of the tight three lane tunnel is there until we come into the light.

I'm sure most of you already know where this is going. Covid is the tunnel. My tight grip on the steering wheel is all of the precautions we have and are continuing to take and endure.

Our fear and caution around Covid is dwindling. We can see that light at the end of the tunnel. Over 100,000,000 Americans have now been vaccinated. We may have herd immunity sometime this summer. But we are not there yet. We still need to keep a tight grip on the steering wheel. We still need to take precautions. We still need to mask up and social distance. Even if vaccinated, we cannot gather in large groups. We must remain vigilant.

Now more than ever, I think of Henry Gunther. He was the last American killed in WWI. He died one minute...just one minute...just 60 seconds before the armistice went into effect on November 11, 1918. How tragic would it be to drop our guard...to drop our precautions, after 16 months of vigilance and become one of the last to die during this pandemic? Hold onto that steering wheel just a bit longer.

Covid may never go away, but it will become manageable. With herd immunity and vigilance, it will become another disease we have to be aware of and take care with, but not one that will transform our lives. But, again, we are not there yet.

Remain vigilant and cautious. Do not release your grip until we really do get to the end of the tunnel...until we are in the light. Hang on. Get your vaccine. Be safe. Follow Maine and Federal CDC guidelines.

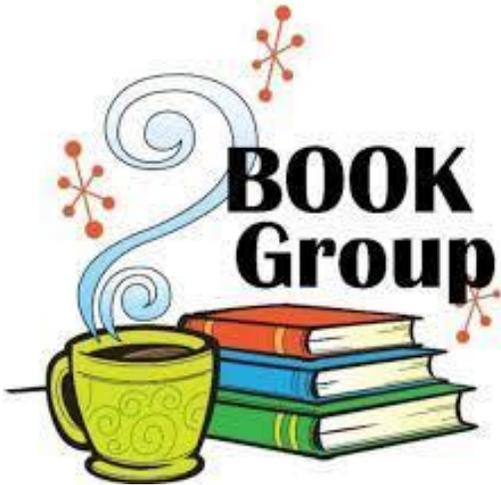

Don't die at the end this year long tragedy. Don't be Covid's Henry Gunther.

On another note, many have asked when we will open the Temple. At the last Board meeting, we decided to follow the Maine and Federal CDC guidelines. Chances are, when they indicate it is safe to re-open, we will re-open. I am very optimistic that we will be open for the High Holidays and probably sooner.

Be safe. Protect yourselves and others. Get a vaccine as soon as you can.

!!BOOK GROUP NEWS!!

Purim is celebrated in the month of Adar, so we read Anna Solomon’s The Book of V for our March 8th meeting. The book is a retelling of the Esther and Vashti story. Present were Fredda Wolf, Judy Abromson, Babs Shapiro, Mitch Ross, Margaret Meyer, Bertha Bodenheimer, Bonnie Faiman and me, Lesli Weiner. While the group could not agree on whether we liked the book or not, we did agree that it was a fascinating intergenerational discussion about the many different women who live in every woman: the lover, the mother, the artist, the rebel, the friend, the caregiver, the beast, the survivor. It takes a bit to get into the story, but once you do, I felt it was a tale worth telling.

Our next book has a provocative title: My Grandfather Would Have Shot Me by Jennifer Teege. Booklist says it’s “a stunning memoir of cultural trauma and personal identity”. Here’s the publisher’s description:

“At age 38, Jennifer Teege happened to pluck a library book from the shelf—and discovered a horrifying fact: Her grandfather was Amon Goeth, the vicious Nazi commandant depicted in Schindler’s List. Reviled as the “butcher of Płaszów,” Goeth was executed in 1946. The more Teege learned about him, the more certain she became: If her grandfather had met her—a black woman—he would have killed her.

Teege’s discovery sends her into a severe depression—and fills her with questions: Why did her birth mother withhold this chilling secret? How could her grandmother have loved a mass murderer? Can evil be inherited?” What do you think?

We’ll be meeting on MONDAY, APRIL 12 at 4PM via zoom. Please bring your suggestions for our next set of books. Hope you’ll join us.....lesli
