Benediction Rabbi Abraham Freedman

Hatikvoh

. Anyone who knows of the progress our congregation has made—in the last decade—must realize that it is just in it's stride. It is young enough not to fear change, to initiate, to test out, to experiment with new ideas and projects all designed to intensify the Jewish religious consciousness of its people yet adhere to the traditions of our Faith. The expansion of the synagogue is primary, because under its dome most of that which has survival value for American Jews will function. It is to this task that we consecrate ourselves as we look ahead. The formal induction of Rabbi Freedman is a prelude to such an undertaking.
