

PETLOCK PURCHASES CENTER STREET BLOCK

Has Occupied Store Next to
The Railroad Tracks For 20 Years

Morris Petlock, proprietor of the Cut Price Market at 90 Center street, has purchased the property in which he has been located for many years from the heirs of Lewis B. Swett in a real estate deal just completed.

Mr. Petlock plans to make extensive alterations and remodeling and during the short time that will be required for this work the store will be closed.

This property is bounded on the north by Center street; on the west by the Maine Central railroad; on the south by land of the heirs of Andrew Tarbox and on the east by the brick building occupied by the Excel Cleaners, and other property on Washington street.

Mr. Petlock has occupied this site and operated a meat market and grocery store there for the last 20 years. When alterations are completed the store will be equipped with every facility to give his customers the best of service and he will continue to carry the fine line of meats and products that have featured this store since it opened nearly 20 years ago.
