TRIBAL ACTIVITIES

To run, to jump, to ride, to swim. To sit in the shade of trees by flowing water. To dream in the silence that lies amid the hills. To feel the solemn loneliness of deep woods. To learn to know, as one knows a mother's face, every change that comes over the heavens from the dewy freshness of early dawn to the restful calm of evening, from the overpowering mystery of the starlit sky to the tender human look with which the moon smiles upon the earth. All this is education of a higher and altogether more real kind than is possible to receive within the walls of a school; and lacking this, nothing shall have power to develop the faculties of the soul in symmetry and completeness.
