Tenement, Kiln-formed Glass, Marty Kremer

Marty Kremer has studied blown and fused glass for many years. Kremer's focus has always been about craftsmanship, and the "art part" has usually happened when he wasn't looking. He has wanted to see within and through the thick walls of a glass vessel - that has led to an exploration of windows, which are passages as well as destinations.

Untitled, Acrylic on Paper, Margaret Nomentana makes non-objective paintings and mixed media collages. Nomentana says her art making is a form of self-discovery, infused with the light of Maine's changing seasons and her own emotional weather. Her engagement with process is visceral, intense and quite physical. She uses an intuitive but informed and purposeful approach in creating shapes that interact with and play off one another.
