Imaginary
Places
Elizabeth
Greenberg

“With my camera, I explore as an archeologist of memories and myths. I look for evidence of secrets, to tell stories of magic, mystery, love, loss, and memories of things never seen. My photographs suggest fictitious memories of moments and places as imagined, as if I am the first to discover them. The images are of what is not there, but for me.”

Elizabeth Greenberg is an artist and educator living on the coast of Maine. She is an explorer of places and memories of that which has never been seen.

Elizabeth’s passion for photography is her guide for living a life and career immersed in a daily conversation about looking at and making pictures.

She is the Provost at Maine Media Workshops + College and teaches in all programs at Maine Media, including a workshop in Hawaii.

For Kerry Michaels taking photographs is about the joy of seeing deeply and intensely. Biophilia is her celebration of truth and beauty found in the natural world.

Kerry Michaels is a fine art and commercial photographer and writer, living in Freeport, ME. Specializing in landscapes, gardens and food, she has photographed five books and her work has been featured in many magazines and websites. Before moving to Maine, she co-produced and directed the award-winning historical documentary River of Steel, about the building of the New York City subway.

Trice Stratmann Ceramic Artist

Trice Stratmann is a ceramic artist who creates vases, containers, platters and bowls using both thrown and hand-built methods. She is a certified Master Gardener and her long-time love of organic plant forms inform her work. Trice is drawn to making ceramic pieces that can stand alone as a beautiful object as well as making functional ceramics. In this body of work, Trice has harnessed the beauty, grace, texture and shape of plants from her own gardens to create a swan song to the life of the garden. She uses a speckled cone clay that has been fired in an electric kiln.
