

Dear Members and Friends,

It has come to our attention that the last email describing the Friday-night dinner discussion topic was incomplete and may be misleading. For the sake of clarity, here is a full description of Friday-night's discussion topic. Hope this clears things up for anyone who was concerned.

Friday, May 8, 6:30 p.m.: Shabbat Services and A Holy Nation: Does Judaism Need Boundaries?

We begin the evening by welcoming Shabbat at 6:30 p.m. Services will be followed by dinner. Reservations required ($10/person, $40/family, max).

Over dinner well discuss Does Judaism Need Boundaries? In the Torah, Jews are called a Nation of Priests, A Holy Nation. A nation of priests, a holy nation? This implies that Jews are separate from the rest of the nations. How much does this apply in our day? Does America's open society make this idea irrelevant, or worse? What are the reasons for maintaining boundaries? Do they change with time? Come and join in this important discussion.
