

Introducing Restorative Justice

What is Restorative Justice and how is it changing the way we think about crime, responsibility, and the role of community? This question will be explored at a Community Forum and Panel Discussion hosted by Adas Yoshuron Synagogue on Thursday, November 5, 7 9 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

Featured at the forum will be Sarah Mattox, Restorative Services Coordinator for the Midcoast Restorative Justice Project (www.rjpmidcoast.org); Dick Snyder, founding board member of the midcoast Maine Restorative Justice Project and a founding member of the Restorative Justice Institute of Maine; and David Long of Rockland, who is deeply involved with Restorative Justice. There will also be a firsthand perspective presented by several inmates of the Maine Coastal Regional Reentry Center.

Moderator Rabbi Natan Margalit will speak about how the concept of Restorative Justice resonates in Jewish tradition.
