

PICTORIAL PIC

CELEBRANTS AT CAMP LOWN, which recently marked the tenth anniversary of its founding with day-long festivities, included, left to right: Max Kominsky, vice-president of the Camp Lown Association; Barney Bloom, camp director; Dr. Phillip W. Lown, president of the association; Dr. Abram Sachar, president of Brandeis University and guest speaker, and Cantor Gregor Shelkan of Temple Mishkan Tefila, Roxbury, guest soloist. The Oakland, Maine, camp, a non-profit Jewish education and recreation center for both boys and girls, played host to over 500 campers, parents and friends at the celebration.

Camp Lown Summer 1954

ISRAELI GENERAL AT CAMP LOWN—A former general in the Army of Israel visited Camp Lown in Oakland Friday and addressed the campers Friday night. General Yigal Allon (front center) painted a word picture of life in Israel for the campers. He is shown with, front row, left to right, Max Kominsky,

Bangor, president of Camp Lown; General Allon, and Philip W. Lown, Newton, Mass. Back row: Bernard O. Bloom, camp director; Marilyn Stern, secretary, campers council; Mike Gould, president, campers council; and Patricia Striar, vice president, campers council. (Photo by Sentinelensman Maxwell)

A Camping Merger

Everyone interested in Jewish education will hail the unprecedented announcement made this week by Dr. Philip W. Lown, Boston manufacturer and nationally prominent leader, and Max Cominsky, distinguished Portland philanthropist, that Camp Lown, founded in Oakland, Maine, some fourteen years ago, is now affiliated with the network of educational camps operated by the National Ramah Commission.

This is an historic step and to our knowledge the first time that two educational camping organizations have merged their experience and know-how to provide better service.